

Investment Manager Review

In October 2020, the Trust's NAV per share returned -1.0% (GBP) while the NASDAQ Biotechnology Index (NBI) returned -4.0% (GBP). The FTSE All-Share Index returned -3.8% (GBP) and the S&P 500 Index returned -2.9% (GBP). IBT's share price returned -1.6% (GBP).

The main positive contributors to the NAV in the month were Mirati, Acadia and MyoKardia. Mirati announced encouraging early stage data for their lung cancer drug, adagrasib, which has the same mode of action as Amgen's drug sotorasib. If the data continues to look good in the coming year, the company may potentially file the drug for approval next year under an accelerated approval process. Acadia reported better than expected sales for their drug nuplazid, which is used to treat a form of psychosis in Parkinson's disease patients. MyoKardia's shares benefited from the news that Bristol Myers Squibb intends to acquire the company for USD13.1BN, at a premium of 61%.

The main detractors from the NAV in the month were Vertex, Amgen and Exelixis. Vertex's shares fell on news that they had discontinued the development of their lead molecule for alpha-1 antitrypsin deficiency. Amgen's shares were down after announcing negative clinical data for a heart failure drug. Exelixis' shares fell due to concerns that weak Cabozantinib sales volumes may translate into a disappointing quarterly earnings report.

Outlook

With the outcome of the U.S. election not yet formally announced and the division of power at the Senate level still to be decided, uncertainties remain which could lead to market volatility in the short term.

Moreover, the rising rates of Covid-19 cases globally are a concern and a U.S. stimulus package has yet to be confirmed. Given the healthcare/biotechnology sector's stable, visible earnings and the accelerating pace of innovation, we are optimistic about the biotech sector's mid to long-term performance.
